Daniel (Doni) Moshe Bulow, a programmer, prankster and gentle soul, passed away May 19, 2013, in Denver.

Rabbi Howard Hoffman officiated at the May 19 graveside service at Rose Hill Cemetery. Feldman Mortuary made the arrangements.

"Doni was a brilliant programmer, entrepreneur, dancer, audiophile, chef, dog rescuer and mischievous prankster," the family said.

"A loving son, devoted brother and caring uncle, he had a questioning mind and a quick and unusual wit.

"He was made of stardust."

Daniel was born Feb. 16, 1994, in Long Beach, NY. He moved to Denver with his parents Ephraim and Aliza Bulow.

A graduate of the Denver Academy of Torah, Daniel was a self-educated Renaissance man.

He was the CEO of geekywizard.com.

Daniel is survived by his parents Ephraim and Aliza Bulow; siblings Elisheva (Yehoshua) Hoffman, Avi (Gitty) Bulow, Sarah (Eliyahu) Verzub, Uri Bulow and Aviva Bulow; and grandparents Oralee Stiles, Norman and Tova Bulow and Mark Beach.

Contributions may be made to JFS' Healing Minds program or Aniei Ircha Kodmim in Israel.